An improvised altar of palms and ferns was arranged in the reception hall, where the ring ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. Dr. Hugh K. Walker, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

The bride was gowned in a coat suit of blue brocade worn with a shadow lace blouse. Her hat was blue velvet, trimmed with a bird of paradise, and she wore a corsage bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies.

The little ring bearer, Miss Elizabeth Johnson, presented the golden circlet in the heart of a rose. She was gowned in a dainty lingerie frock over pink silk.

The bride and bridegroom with a few friends and relatives were entertained at 6 o'clock dinner at the Ansley.

DEPOSIT OF ASPHALTUM

Bored Into Within Three Miles of Hopkinsville and is Fine Specimen.

ON THE BRADSHAW PIKE.

Lucky Find on Small Place, the Property of David Scruggs.

While boring a well on his place, three miles Southeast of town on the Bradshaw pike, last week, David Scruggs, at a depth of 44 feet, bored into a thick vein of what seems to be asphalt or bitumen. The vein is 3 feet thick and the well is being bored on below it. Mr. Scruggs brought a sample of the asphalt to town, which may be seen in this office. A specimen was turned over to Geoffrey Morgan, who has sent it to Lexington for analysis. The asphalt looks like the crude product used in the bitulithic street construction, burns with a smoky flame and sticks like tar. If it is genuine mineral asphalt and the deposit is large enough to be taken out for commercial purposes, Mr. Scruggs has made a valuable find. The product is used in street building, for roofing and for many other purposes.

INTERESTING MEETING

Held By The Academy of Medicine Monday Night.

The meeting of the Academy of Medicine, the new organization of the city physicians, was one of the largest in attendance since the organization was effected. The meeting was held in the office of Dr. J. W. Harned.

The main feature was a paper by Dr. Harned and his subject was "Gunshot Wounds and Their Treatment." The paper was an able one and was greatly enjoyed by all present. The subject was thoroughly discussed and many important points were brought out.

The society is proving highly beneficial to the members, both socially and scientifically.

Census of City.

The Rex Theatre, under the superintendency of Mr. Shrode, has a number of young ladies at work taking a census of the city. This is a good work and the citizens should assist them as best they can. What The Rex people have in view does not matter. "There's a reason," and the people know that The Rex will not do anything that is not to the interest of the people. Hopkinsville's population is increasing so fast that it is time for another census.

Many important questions concerning the city will be asked, and when the reports of the young ladies are published there'll be some interesting reading matter for everybody.

Carnegie Library Now Being Erected on a Lot Purchased by the City.

The court of appeals Tuesday sustained Circuit Judge Hanbery in his decision that the city of Hopkinsville could not use a part of Peace Park, bequeathed to Hopkinsville by John C. Latham, as a site for a Carnegie library. The plan was abandoned last fall and the library is being erected on another lot purchased by the city.

PRAYER SERVICE.

National Constitutional Prohibition Amendment January 15, 1914.

Hon. Richmond Pearson Hobson has introduced into the House of Representatives a Joint Resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union has called for a World Day of Prayer to-day, for the cause of National Prohibition in America; it is called National Constitutional Prohibition Amendment Day, and it is to be observed by white-ribboners everywhere as a day of fasting and prayer for victory in this campaign. The local W. C. T. U. has arranged to observe the day and will carry out the very interesting program prepared by the National. They will be assisted by the ministers of the city, some of the business men, and a number of women. The musical program directed by Mrs. H. H. Perkins and Mrs. L. E. Foster will be excellent.

The meetings will be held at the Christian church in the morning from 10 to 12 o'clock, and in the afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock. Everybody who is interested in the cause of temperance and prohibition is cordially invited and urged to attend these meetings, to participate in the exercises, and to pray earnestly for the success of the cause. The men are especially asked to come; if it is impossible to be present during the whole meeting, drop in for a few minutes at any time and lend your support and encouragement to the movement.

The young people and children are asked to come to the afternoon service which will close with a Young People's and Children's Rally between 3:30 and 4 o'clock.

50 WAGONS

Line Up Near Imperial Factory To Be Unloaded.

If there are those who think the Imperial Co. is not in market, they are mightily mistaken. One morning this week not less than fifty wagons were lined up on North Clay street, the owners waiting their turn to drive to the delivery doors to be unloaded. The counting was done at 10 o'clock and how many had been unloaded before that hour cannot be told, or how many got into line afterwards. But one thing is certain, the Imperial is "in it," and in earnest.

Output Increased.

Kentucky's output of petroleum in 1913 was 500,000 barrels, or 15,632 more than in 1912.

Plain Facts And Figures

Mr. Editor:

I desire to make a personal avowal. I am an adherent and admirer of Herman Southall. I will vote for him over any man of my acquaintance for city attorney. I am more proud of his achievements than I can express, especially since the higher courts have upheld him in his contentions. The city Judge has certainly made good, and has made to me one of the most acceptable officials the city has ever had. But the interest of the city financially is the question I am trying to get before the citizens. Now "plain facts" may be plain to some but plain figures as they appeared in the New Era Tuesday are the worst I have ever seen. If I ever saw as many errors in as few figures I don't know when it was.

1st. The fees and salary for 1910 are not added correctly.

2nd. The year 1911 is given twice in the table.

3rd. The salaries and fees according to that table do not make a total of $6244.13.

4th. The Judge's salary for neither 1911 nor 1913 was $360.

5th. The average according to the figures was not $1558.54 but was $1491.64, so plain figures are anything but plain to me.

Why make this average for four years? Why not five or ten years? I will give you the correct figures for five years and you can go further back knowing the average will be reduced each year.

|         | salary | fees     | total     |
|---------|--------|----------|-----------|
| 1909    | $400  | $802.25 | $1202.25 |
| 1910    | 400    | 1256.75  | 1656.75   |
| 1911    | 400    | 1149.51  | 1549.51   |
| 1912    | 400    | 1142.50  | 1542.50   |
| 1913    | 400    | 973.20   | 1373.20   |
|         |        |          | 7324.21   |
| Average |        |          | 1461.84   |

In 1910 and 1911 $117 was back fees paid to the former Judge after his term expired and not to Judge Wood.

I am much obliged for permission to examine the books, but that is just what I don't want to do in person.

The four banks of this city make sworn statements several times every year and yet these statements do not keep the government from sending a special examiner to look into their records several times each year. M. C. Forbes has all his books examined and audited by special examiners. J. H. Anderson & Co. do the same. The Ky. Public Service Co. does the same and I expect other corporations do the same thing.

Now I want to give you some plain facts and figures. Look at this table.

|              | City   | Pop. | Sal. pd. City | Judge, no fees nor com. |
|--------------|--------|------|---------------|-------------------------|
| Owensboro    | 16,011 |      | $1,000.00    |                         |
| Henderson    | 11,452 |      | 800.00        |                         |
| Bowling Gr'n | 9,173  |      | 750.00        |                         |
| Hopkinsville | 9,419  |      | 1500.00       |                         |

It seems to me that the increase in salaries is not justified, and while I had persistently declined to sign a petition for Commission form of Government after the increase I soon found a petition and signed it. Now let's save some of our money to pay commissioners. While I believe we have the best city in the state and good officers, I believe we should retrench and save something for another time.

H. H. ABERNATHY.

Jan. 1. Previous to that time the

Duty.

One sound always comes to the ear that is open; it is the steady drum-beat of Duty. No music in it, perhaps—only a dry rub-a-dub. Ah, but that steady beat marks the time of the whole orchestra of earth and heaven!
It says to you: "Do your work—do the duty nearest you!" Keep step to that drum-beat, and the dulcet march is taking you home.—George S. Merriam.

this same "burn" for another hole and drove right into it. "Gang ye an'

he growled.

KNOWN AS "BIDDY" M'REE

By MAURICE SMILEY.

About the only reason for calling him "Biddy" was that he was such a "mother boy," as most of the folks in the neighborhood called him.

Not that they looked down on him for being so devoted to his mother.
That is, those whose opinion really amounted to anything. Of course some of the light-heads made fun of a man of twenty-five still "tied to his mother's apron strings," as they rang the changes on the old cheap witticism. Tom didn't care for that.
Perhaps, however, he really did care after Millie Lee took the district school. He didn't want her to make fun of him.

After Tom's father had worn himself out on the old place and had been gathered to his fathers, Tom's two brothers and sisters had "married off" one by one. But he stayed on, wringing by unremitting industry a scanty living from the rocky soil.

If Tom had ever given any thought to settling up a home of his own, he had resolutely banished it.
"It's a shame, Tom," said his mother, wistfully, "that you should be tied down here on this old place to an old woman, when you ought to be settling up a home of your own."

"All right, then," he replied, with a smile, "I'll bundle you off to the poorhouse and strike out for the city."

Then he caught his mother up in his arms and said, tenderly:

"Never you mind, mother, I'm not worrying about it and why need you?"

But all the same Tom did a good deal of worrying. For one thing, Millie Lee, while she seemed to like him more than any of the other young men in the neighborhood, was yet a little too fond, apparently, of Bud Brighton to preserve Tom's entire peace of mind.

Then there was the matter of that black streak down in the pasture.
Tom hardly dared to hope that there was coal down there. Secretly he was sinking a rude shaft, though he told his mother he was only digging a well to increase the supply of water for the stock.

Then came the day when he "struck it." He could hardly realize all that it meant when his drill hit the hard, black substance which proved to be an excellent quality of coal.

When he went home that night two surprises awaited him. His mother was seriously ill and Millie Lee was waiting on her.

For reasons of his own, he did not say anything about finding coal in paying quantities. He would stoke his chance with Millie on the merits of the case and if she cared for him at all, she would accept a hard-working, poor man.

He watched her as she prepared the evening meal and a sudden resolve took possession of him.

"It looks awful homelike to see you around the old place, Millie," he said.
"I've got something on my mind that I have had there for a long time."

She paused in the act of taking the biscuits from the oven and possibly the heat from the stove made her face flush.

"I know I ain't good enough for you," he went on, bluntly. "I haven't had any education. I've just been taking care of mother ever since I was a boy and I hint had the chance that lots of young men have had.
You know what the old place is. There ain't much to be made out of it. It wouldn't support three people very well, specially when one of 'em has been used to better things."

Millie was nervously setting the table by this time. She nodded as he paused, but neither of them noticed the disheveled figure peering in the doorway, the eyes wild with fever.
"I don't mind telling you, Tom, that I would marry you if it was not for your mother. There isn't enough for us all. You will have to do something about her."

Perhaps she put the test badly, for Tom thought she really meant that he must give up his mother and let her shift for herself. The thought cut him like a knife and he stared out into the night too pale to say anything for a time.

"I can't do that, Millie," he said slowly. "I can't leave my old mother —not even for you. I didn't think you was that kind. I thought you was different."

Before she could explain Tom had passed into the bedroom, to give a cry of alarm a moment later and rush out into the darkness.

He found her wandering aimlessly along the road to the town, babbling incoherently in her delirium about "getting out of the way."

Strong and tender arms bore her back to her home and beside the bed where Tom was kneeling Millie Lee put her hands on his shoulder and said:

"I didn't mean it the way you thought, dear. I was only trying you.
I only meant—that I—"

"That you love me too much to be a burden to me?" asked Tom in a whisper of fierce joy as his mother dropped off into a calm sleep.

Millie nodded as she put her head where her hands had been.

The Circus He Had Eaten.

Little Freddie had just made his first acquaintance with animal crackers. After eating quite an assortment of them Freddie became very thoughtful.

"What makes you so pensive, dear?"
asked his mother.

"Oh, I was just thinking what a circus was going on inside of me."

Dr. King's New Discovery is companions who came to the marriage feast of his wife—afterward burned to death with her father by the Philistines—and for the answer to which he promised to give them 30 sheets and 30 changes of garments.

"Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness." For the outcome, see the book of Judges, 14:12-20.

Getting Shallow.

Little Willie was taking his first trip abroad. About the third day out they passed a freighter. She was not carrying any cargo and about three feet of the bright red below her waterline was visible. Willie gazed a minute and then exclaimed: "Oh, papa, look how the ocean has gone down!"

New Phonograph Clock.

A phonograph clock has been perfected by Max Marcus, a German, after many years of labor. It not only keeps time to the second, but tells the time in a clear baritone voice. "Four o'clock!" and "Four-thirty!" says the clock in loud, distinct but very pleasantly modulated tones and the half and full hours may be repeated at will by the pressing of a button. The quarters are not spoken.

Water Pipes Froze and River Had More Ice Than at Any Time.

The river had a pretty good start furnishing the young people with skating last Monday night, as it was frozen entirely over. The temperature was reported as being as low as 14 degrees in some parts of the city. Water pipes in a few homes were frozen, but no damages of consequence has been reported. Winter is now about half over and there is not much prospect for an ice season. The coal man is at the top now and the delivery wagons are kept quite busy. The building of the concrete foundation for the library building and inner walls and floor supports of the postoffice building have not been interfered with thus far.

The Kitty League.

The Paducah News-Democrat very wisely suggest that it is time for the directors of the K. I. T. Baseball League to get together at once and outline plans for the coming season. Following the suggestion made in these columns some time since it emphasizes the fact that it is well to begin casting about for material for the 1914 season. Players not only want to know whether their league will quit business, but for self interest they want to find out whether they should arrange to go elsewhere. It is not wise to delay this matter longer, as the most desirable men may be gobbled up by other leagues and in the way of incompetency 1913 may be repeated, there being then no possible change of the Hopkinsville Club, or any other as to that, getting anything but third class men. The News-Democrat says that if Dr. Bassett, who has gone over to the Southern League, does not call a meeting at once the directors should.

FOR NURSES TO REMEMBER

Those Who Have the Care of Invalids Should Keep These Important Points in Mind.

Invalids who dislike the flavor of meat extract will be able to take it if a teaspoonful or so is added to a cup of hot boiling milk. The milk disguises the taste of the meat extract. A small quantity of this mixture taken when there is a feeling of exhaustion will prove an admirable restorative.

Every room in which there is sickness should be thoroughly aired twice a day. Shield the patient with a screen and plenty of covers during the airing.

Placing a board three inches wide and the full width of the window under the lower sash will afford good ventilation during the day without unduly cooling the room.

If, however, it becomes necessary to sweeten the room quickly a small lump of gum camphor placed on an old saucer with a few lighted matches will soon overcome any heaviness of the air.

Another simple deodorizer is a bit of burning string. Cut a bit of the heavy white variety, hang it over a bar of something, say, a chair, light at each end, blow out the tiny flame, and let it smolder until the bit of string is consumed.

FAR-REACHING ECHO

Officer—You say the chauffeur sounded his horn just as the machine struck the man?
Witness—Yes, sir.
Officer—Was the victim killed instantly?
Witness—So instantly, sir, that he must have heard the echo of that horn in the next world.

Various Edible Insects.
The Creoles of Bourbon are said to broil and eat the cockroach. Ants, cooked in various ways are eaten by many different tribes. The Africans cook them in butter while in Brazil a resinous sauce is used. The Siamese use the eggs of the ant. The white ant is eaten raw by some, while ant pie is a delicacy among some of the natives of India. The natives of Ceylon are said to eat bees and the Mexicans eat a cake made out of bees' eggs.

Tomato Juice Valuable.
Tomato juice will remove ink stains from linen.

TO MAKE STUDY OF MONKEYS

Important Experiments, in the Interests of Science, Shortly to Be Undertaken.

Monkey politicians and orators and "simian" prima donnas may be a common thing in the course of a few years, if an experiment to be made by scientists proves successful.

According to the Journal of the American Medical Association scientists who have struggled for years to prove or disprove the Darwinian theory, and incidentally have worked out medical problems and cures with the aid of monkeys, are now planning to establish a monkey farm on the Canary Islands, where the simians may be more closely studied.

Fear that in a few years the monkeys will be almost extinct has caused the movement for the experimental station. Science and medicine would sustain a severe loss if such a state of affairs should exist, says the Journal.

The "primates" are to be transported from Africa and allowed to live in their natural state. A study will be made of their language and their ability to learn to talk, gesture and sing. They will be taught color perception, and the influence of certain colors upon the nerves of the monkeys will be studied and an attempt made to apply the same tests to human beings.

One of the main studies will be the hypothesis of a double origin of man, the belief universal among savages being that anthropoids living in the trees of their front yards are not brutes, but men like themselves.

The propagation of the simian is an important factor in the study of medicine and the discovery of serums and cures for human ills. Numerous tests have proved, says the Journal, that diseases which are prevalent in mankind exist also in monkeys, and the simian will react to the test practically the same as man.

As an example, it was a monkey which first taught that bovine tuberculosis could be transmitted to human beings, although not as easily, as in monkeys. Four species of simians will be taken to the Canary Islands, the gorilla, chimpanzee, orangutan and gibbon, as these have proved to have more human traits than other anthropoids.

Where Women Rule.
A little village has long existed on the Cape of Shima in Japan the name of which means the "Settlement of Nymphs." In this village woman is the predominant partner. The chief industry is pearl fishing and the women are the fishers. The men stay at home and do the housework.

Some of the men became discontented recently and began to practice diving, with the idea of becoming pearl fishers themselves. The women, dreading their competition, ordered them to discontinue their diving, and when they refused, declared a boycott against them. They were chased from their homes, and had to take up their abode in a camp outside the village.

The men have petitioned parliament for their rights, and in the meantime the local police are doing their best to bring peace between the contending sexes.—Youth's Companion.

ONE GIRL'S VALUE

Saved Family Fortune by Simple Process of Walking Up Church Aisle.

By MRS. GEN. GEORGE E. PICKETT.

"Beastly play," grumbled Mr. Lester, as he sat straight and stiff in his carriage on the homeward way.

Mrs. Lester assented, leaning back listlessly. Most plays had lost interest for her. There had been a time when she had fancied that the drama of life never would pale in its charms.

That was long, long ago. She must have been some one else living in a different world.

"What the devil's that?"

The carriage stopped with a sudden jolt. The footman opened the door.

"Don't be alarmed, sir. It's only a drunk man ran out under the horses' feet and got knocked down."

"Served him right," growled Mr. Lester.

The light from a lamp fell full upon the ghastly face of the unknown as he was lifted from the street. Mrs. Lester, seeing it, sprang forward. Her husband caught her arm.

"Don't be silly, Myrta."

She sank back against the cushions and the carriage rolled on.

The hack curtain that had fallen upon the drama which so long ago had ceased to be charming rolled back and she saw again—no, not that face, but a glorified face that seemed to have died into this one.

It was at the American minister's in Paris that she saw it. The breath of the flowers swept down faintly through the years and the ill of the music heat upon her heart.

"You have found a wonderful pianist," she said to the minister.

"Am not I in luck?—an American, too, so doubly valuable."

The diplomat had represented his country in many royal courts, but, unlike his confreres, he had not lost his fine old democracy, inherited through a long line of ancestors who had bowed neither to royal king nor bonanza king.

His young god of music did not appreciate in his estimation because he wore on his chain a ruby that a queen had given him, or because princesses had been proud to learn of him, or because an empress had permitted him to dedicate a symphony to her and 'sent for him when it was played in the court theater and let him kiss her jewel hand.

"The touch of genius is the brightest jewel in the world's whole collection of gems," she said.

Neither did the minister regard it as lowering that his brilliant young countryman should convert his musical notes into bank notes of a high pitch. He held the democratic notion that if a man did not have money he should earn it, and there could not be a more beautiful way.

"The Nightingale will not let anyone else play her accompaniments."

Myrta experienced a sudden unacknowledged pang of jealousy of the Nightingale.

"I will introduce him and you shall have one dance with him."

"Please be careful how you introduce fascinating devotees of any of the arts to her," said Mrs. Langton, in impressive protest. "I am her chaperon. Do not involve my position in greater responsibility than is necessary."

Mrs. Langton was a chaperon delightful to the soul of youth. Myrta's father and mother had known her only in America. If they had seen her in Paris they might have selected a more rigid duenna for their daughter when she developed a longing to have her voice trained by Marchesi. In that event the young American pianist would not have spent his mornings playing accompaniments while she sang, or performing his own wonderful creations while she listened in a beatific trance and her chaperon sat by in admiring delight.

Once they went to hear the Nightingale sing.

"Oh, I envy you—I envy you!" said Myrta, clasping her hands in despair. "I would give the world for a voice like that."

Just then the eyes of the accompanist were turned toward her and a wondrous light that was not of music leaped to his face.

"Oh, I pity you—I pity you!" she thought, clasping her hands in rapture. "Not all the gifts that all the gods have bestowed upon all the worlds of the universe are worth one look like that."

"Myrta," said Mrs. Langton, next day. "I have a letter from your father. He and your mother will be here on the 15th and I am to have you ready to go back with them on the next steamer. He asks very particularly if I have kept you at your music and away from social acquaintances. I am glad that my conscience is at rest on that point. I can assure him that you have met only musical people who help you along with your lessons. I think he wants you to do something important for him."

"I never did anything for papa but upset his desk and lose his papers and worry him for money. I should think if he had anything of importance to be done he would go after somebody else."

Oh, that last, last night, when the notes of the farewell rang heart breakingly on the moon-filled air!

"I am coming home to America next year. Will you welcome me?"

She clasped her hands and looked her answer with shining, happy eyes. He took off the chain with the ruby and put it around her neck.

"It was given to me by a queen of a mere earthly court. I give it to the queen of love's court."

They were a day out at sea when Myrta began to learn the object of her sudden return.

"My child, I want to tell you something."

She turned surprised eyes toward her mother. She could not remember that that faithful parent had ever told her anything except to be quiet and not laugh so much, and that pickles were bad for the complexion, and she had not been ceremonious about those communications. She waited and her mother went on nervously.

"You must know, my dear, that things have not been going well with your papa. At one time we thought all was lost, and even the house must be given up. Think of me in a hired apartment, fifth story, hack, and a woman shaking carpets over my window from the flat above!"

A piece of Dresden china on a wooden chimney piece! Myrta's imagination declined the jump.

"Happily the misfortune has been averted by—whom do you think?"

Again speculation halted.

"Mr. Lester—your father's old friend, you remember?—though, of course, years younger than your father—who retired from the street last year just before the crash in Great Western came and put his money in—What is it they put it in, Myrta?"

"Pianos," said Myrta, unconsciously, looking back to that last evening.

"Mercy! No, child! Whoever heard of putting money in pianos? Sometimes they put it in bureau drawers, though Mr. Lester did not. Well, he put it there, wherever it was, and it brings in an income that would make your head dizzy. He is willing to put up the money to save us, and all because he wants to marry you. As soon as he sees you and gets your consent your father will have enough to put him where he was in business. Your father told him that he need have no doubt of your consent. You never have been disobedient, and you certainly would not begin now when so much depends upon you. How could I live in a seventh story flat on some unknown street and do my hair myself? Are you not glad that you can save me from it?"

Poor, pretty, weak mamma! How, indeed?

Myrta leaned out and dropped something into the water. She lingered a moment gazing after it as if she might be wishing that she could follow it. It gleamed in sparkling shades of red as it fell. She wondered if it would hide away in the wreck of a lost ship down at the bottom of the sea, and if a diver would bring it up into the sun again some day and if it would sparkle on the finger of a girl happier than the one who drowned it in the waves.

"Yes," she said, faintly.

Her mother drew her into her arms and embraced her with a languid affection more like the real article than she had ever before bestowed upon her.

"What a mistake I have made all those years! I have regretted that I had not a son instead of a daughter. I see now how much more real value there is in a girl. What boy could save his family in such a crisis by the simple and beautiful process of walking up a church aisle in clouds of wonderful lace, surrounded by a wilderness of lovely flowers, and murmuring a few words in a shy, pretty way, and then going off to do the grand tour of the world? You ought to see the exquisite prayer book Mr. Lester has bought for you to carry—all pearl and silver and the inscription in diamonds. Isn't it glorious to be a girl?"

"Suppose so? You will know so when you see that prayer book and costume. We ordered the gown in Paris and Felix said it was the most elegant thing he had ever created. We could afford to do the handsome now that we are in such luck. Your husband can never say that you came to him a beggar if we have been on the verge of ruin."

It all came back to Mrs. Lester as the carriage rolled along—the low, sad music of that last farewell and the face that looked out from the white moonlight of that night in Paris. She had never again seen that face until—

"Here we are. Are you asleep? No wonder, after that stupid play—enough to set the whole town asleep!"

She alighted from the carriage and followed the hurly figure of her husband up the steps. In the doorway she turned and looked out into the pale, star-swept east.

By and by the dawn would glimmer over that horizon and a new day would begin—a long, dull, wearisome day, so like all the other days that it would not be known from any yesterday that ever was.

Music No Charms.

Most of us suffer in silence when the whistling fiend is torturing us from the other corner of the railway carriage, but recently one was dealt with frankly and firmly on an English train.

He was in the train returning from Clacton. In the corner opposite him was a messenger reading a newspaper, and in the other a man in engineer's clothes who had nothing to occupy his mind.

Presently the engineer began to whistle "Hitchy Koo." He whistled desultorily and inaccurately, and every few minutes the other passengers would glare at him over the top of his paper.

Outside Colchester the paper was lowered and a voice rang out: "Sir, allow me to inform you that this is not a hind shop."

For the rest of the journey there was a silence.

WELL TO REMEMBER HINTS FOR THE HOME

SIMPLE METHOD OF CURING THE TROUBLESOME FELONS.

Easy Way to Keep Silver Bright—Use No Soap on Hardwood Floors
—Several Handy Hints for the Housewife.

To cure a felon, take common salt, as used for salting pork or beef, dry in the oven, pound fine, mix with equal parts of spirits of turpentine, put in a cloth and wrap around the affected part. As it gets dry put on more. Twenty-four hours of this treatment will kill the felon.

Soaking mildew stains in buttermilk or sour milk will many times remove them, but not always. Try a solution of one heaping teaspoonful of chlo-ride of lime to a quart of soft water; strain, when well dissolved, and dip the mildewed spots in it until the stains disappear, then rinse immediately and thoroughly in clear water.

Silver will keep bright, and much laborious cleaning and polishing saved, if once a week, it is immersed in sour milk and left there for 20 minutes or longer. Wash it in very hot water and polish as quickly as possible. Soft pieces of old flannellette are excellent to use in wiping and polishing silver.

Do not use soap on your hardwood floor; instead add half cup of borax to a pail of hot water, and rinse your mop well each time, and see how nice and white the floor will look.

When any article of food burns and sticks to the saucepan or kettle while boiling, set the vessel at once into a pan of cold water, while you get another kettle ready, thus preventing a scorched table. You will surely do this if the food is not too badly burned.

Try having a bed of Sweet Williams.
Once started it will require little care, and will last for years, rewarding your trouble by a profusion of pretty flowers.

And, by the way, there is nothing better than ammonia to remove bloodstains; soak the articles in water to which has been added a generous portion of the ammonia.—Mrs. J. C. B., Mt. Pleasant, Mich.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Encourage the children to have a garden of their own.

A saucer of charcoal placed in a refrigerator will help to keep it pure.

Scorch marks on white fabrics may be removed by hanging articles in strong sunlight.

Try browning flour for making gravies, keeping a can of it on hand. It makes a nice brown gravy quickly.

Pour boiling water over frozen eggs and let them remain until cold; they may then be used as if never frozen.

Dig a root of horse radish now and fix it up for a relish. You may shed a few tears over it, but they will be tears of joy.

A few grains of rice in the salt cellar will prevent the salt caking, as they keep it loosened and moving when shaken.

Try pouring scalding water on apples, as well as on tomatoes, peaches and similar fruit, letting them remain in it a few moments. The skins may be more easily removed and much labor saved.

To remove ink stains, sprinkle with lemon juice and salt, let it remain until dry, and rinse. If the color of the goods is affected, sponge with weak ammonia. This treatment will not injure the fabric.

Thin goods are apt to pucker when sewed on the machine. To overcome this difficulty put two thicknesses of tissue paper, or other soft paper, beneath the cloth and stitch through paper and all. The seam will be smooth and the paper is easily torn away.

Sweet Clover for Linen.

Gather branches of flowering clover and dry them for your linen chest and shelves.

Tie them up in bags of cheesecloth and spread them between sheets and table linen and underwear and you will find the linen sweeter and daintier than it is under the influence of lavender.

To Clean Rubber.

A rubber hot-water bottle that has become soiled can be cleaned very easily by the following method: Rub the bottle well with a piece of flannel which has been dipped in hot water and well soaped. Then dry with a soft cloth and the rubber will look like new.

Flatirons.

When you finish on washday, before emptying the water out of the tubs, put the irons in for some minutes.
Then take them out and scrub with a soft, dry cloth. That done in this way each week keeps the irons in very good order.

Apple Sauce Cakes.

One cup sugar, one-half cup butter,
one cup apple sauce, not sweetened, one teaspoonful soda (dissolve in apple sauce), two cups flour, one cup raisins spices.

To Clean Vinegar Cruets.

When cleaning vinegar cruets always use potato parings, filling the cruet with water and letting it stand until the parings ferment.

SMALL POINTS THAT WILL GREATLY ADD TO COMFORT.

Requisite for Good Coffee—Proper Care of Valuable Laces or Delicate Fabrics—Best Way to Preserve Jewelry of Value.

By EMILY ANDREWS.

To have good coffee, the coffee pot should be kept scrupulously clean and never set aside after using without washing and drying thoroughly.

An earthen bowl filled with quicklime, placed in a closet, will absorb moisture and also act as a disinfectant. It will serve to keep away rats and mice as they dislike lime.

Valuable laces or delicate fabrics should not be laid away in white paper, as chloride of lime is often used in bleaching white paper, which will injure any article that lies against it any length of time. Blue paper will be found better than white.

Salt and vinegar is excellent for cleaning discolored enamelware.

Chamois skin should be kept on hand for polishing furniture, especially pieces that are highly veneered. It will also give luster to mirrors, silver and plate glass after washing them. Its value can only be appreciated by use. It can be easily cleaned by washing in cold water with plenty of soap and pulling in every direction until dry. If it is stretched vigorously it will be as good as new.

Gold rings and other pieces of jewelry set with hard, transparent stones, can be cleaned with warm water, a white soap and a little ammonia. A soft tooth brush may be used for getting behind the settings and stones, but for pearls or turquoise, or any soft gem the water should be avoided. Polish with a soft chamois and they will be bright and sparkling.

Velvet or ribbon bows can be made quite fresh without removing from hats, by heating a curling iron, wrapping it in a wet cloth and inserting it in the loops, opening them as wide as the loops demand, and holding until quite dry.

To mend kid gloves, use a small needle and a fine cotton thread, well waxed. A thick needle will cut the edges of the kid and sewing silk will wear right through. Place the ripped place over a glove mender and take up a stitch on one side and then on the opposite, and draw them together.
Do not place the stitches too closely together; mend on the right side, fastening the threads well.

Breathing deeply will stimulate the heart action and the circulation, and is an aid to perfect health.

Fresh air is the basis of all physical beauty and health, and if more people realized its value, half the ills of humanity would be cured.

Heavy Russian crash makes very attractive portieres; if too narrow, overcast the two widths together with the coarsest of carpet thread similar to the Bagdad portieres. No hangings can be more effective than this soft-toned, colorless material, and it is especially attractive for libraries or studios.

Lack of ventilation in a bedroom will often produce sleeplessness.
Though the air should not blow directly on the bed there cannot be too much of it.

Turpentine sprayed in the haunts of cockroaches will often disperse them and often quite destroys them.

If stockings are washed before wearing they will last longer. This is especially true of lisle and silk stockings. The slight shrinkage brings the threads closer together.

A few chopped raisins mixed in boiled frosting, before spreading on the cake, makes a change quite palatable.

An alcohol sponge bath is often found refreshing and soothing by those sleepless on account of the heat. A tablespoonful of alcohol to a cup of cool water is the proportion for such a sponge.

A nervous person will find relief in a hot bath just before retiring.
The body should be immersed for fifteen minutes in water that is hot without being exhausting.

For Bruised Furniture.

Here is a discovery which has been of great use to me when removing bruises from furniture, writes a correspondent. Wet the part with warm water; double a piece of brown paper five or six times, then soak it in warm water and lay it on the dent.
Apply a warm (not hot) flatiron until the moisture has evaporated. If the bruises are not gone, repeat the process. You will find this very good, and if the surface of the furniture is not broken the dent will disappear and leave no trace.

To Remove Handkerchiefs.
When washing handkerchiefs break up a quarter of an ounce of orris root and tie it in a piece of muslin, boiling it in with the handkerchiefs for a quarter of an hour.

When dry iron them carefully, and they retain a delicate violet odor that is very refreshing.

Use about three pints of water for this quantity of orris root.

Protects Floors.

Rubber tips for the dining room chairs will save the hardwood floors from constant scratching. The tips cost little and save both work and the floors. The dining room chairs are so likely to be pushed back in a way so near the polish of the floor that the chairs in particular should be protected with tips.
